Long weekends are a gift, a chance to break away from the routine, immerse yourself in new experiences, and embrace the simple joys of life. Idaho, with its stunning landscapes and welcoming small towns, is an underrated gem for those seeking a rejuvenating escape. Known for its crystal-clear lakes, prominent agricultural sector, scenic Boise River, and a wealth of outdoor activities, Idaho offers a diverse range of destinations perfect for unwinding and reconnecting with nature. Towns like Sandpoint, with its serene Lake Pend Oreille, and Post Falls, nestled along the Spokane River, combine natural beauty with relaxing attractions. These seven picturesque towns provide the ideal backdrop for a long weekend getaway, blending relaxation and exploration to refresh your mind and spirit.

McCall

Set against the breathtaking backdrop of Payette Lake's sparkling waters, McCall is an idyllic retreat, unrivaled for a long weekend escape. Nature enthusiasts will find Payette Lake an ideal destination, with its crystal-clear waters inviting kayaking, paddleboarding, and swimming as the primary activities. For a more leisurely experience, McCall Lake Cruises invites you aboard for a scenic tour of the lake, complete with panoramic views of the surrounding mountains. Transitioning from the water to the greens, golfers will find their stride at Whitetail Golf Club, known for its beautifully maintained course and serene setting. After a day in the fresh mountain air, settle in with a visit to McCall Brewing Company, Idaho's second-oldest brewery. Open daily for lunch and dinner, this full-service restaurant pairs hearty meals with craft beers, making it a local favorite for dining and relaxing.

When it comes to lodging, The Shore Lodge is a standout choice for those seeking comfort and elegance. This lakeside getaway boasts a full-service spa, a waterfront restaurant, and private beach access, creating the perfect setting to unwind after a day of exploring McCall's many attractions.
